About a year ago my little sister brought home an inexpensive oil diffuser home. It smelled amazing and lasted twice as long as a candle or potpourri ever does.

I love trying different types of diffusers and different smells. But, my favorite part of the diffuser has to be the bottle holding the little sticks that "diffuse" the smell.

Joya, a New York City based creative collective specializing in fragrances, has partnered with Barneys New York to offer a unique collection of vintage pieces to showcase the fantastic smells of the diffusers.

I'm going to have to find someone in the NYC area to pick me up one of the two scents that are available; Petitgrain Sur Fleurs and La Granada. The Petitgrain Sur Fleurs is a mix of orange peel, orange blossom, sweet almond oil, and jasmin amongst many other fruity scents. La Granada includes pink peppercorn, amongst other scents and is on the more musky masculine side.
