Skip the Burger: According to researchers at the University of Chicago, eating one less burger a week substantially lowers your greenhouse gas emissions, while switching to a vegetarian diet can reduce your carbon output by 1.5 tons. By comparison, trading in a standard sedan for a hybrid car cuts your carbon footprint by one ton.

Joya New York Mixology: Honey Whiskey Fix Candle

Why It's Good:

Warm up your winter with Joya's new sweet and smoky layered candle, which we liken to sipping a honey-faced hot toddy by a flickering fire. Delicate calla lily and honey meld with rich notes of oak and blackberry in this hand-poured work of art, which features a striped pillar on a Deco-esque ceiling tile base designed by Vane. For a real chill-chaser, draw a hot bath and steep by scented candlelight.

Why It's Green:

Hand-poured locally in New York City, the Mixology candle line uses surplus paraffin, saving this raw material from going to waste. The metal ceiling tiles—also from surplus stock—are individually pressed, cut, and painted by hand. Give these a second life as a chic coin or jewelry catch-all.
